Description:

Welcome to thirty-three acres of northwoods land with the kind of setting that invites ideas. Whether you envision a future home, seasonal getaway, hunting retreat, or a place to gather generations around campfires and fall weekends, this property offers the space and freedom to shape it into your own. A storage shed is already in place, along with a pavilion designed for cooking maple syrup, a rare feature that speaks to the land's outdoor traditions and simple pleasures.

Tucked within the acreage is a larger structure that once served as a cabin. The interior has been stripped down, creating an opportunity for someone with vision to restore it into a rustic deer camp outpost, workshop, or weekend basecamp, while planning something entirely new elsewhere on the property. Towering trees, open space to roam, and the privacy that comes with acreage create a setting that feels removed from the noise, yet full of possibility.
